Additional multiple screening for a computer and comprising a hinge means connected to the primary viewing monitor and further connected to the additional screening. The hinge means allowing the additional screening to pivot to a forward position or to pivot to a rearward position relative to the primary monitor. The hinge means further allowing the additional screening to be folded back to the sides of the monitor so as to be out-of-the-way while the additional screening is not in use.

The primary monitor receiving imaging or wording transmission from or through the computer, the additional screening to be used for receiving imaging or wording from or through the computer or primary monitor, or both.
